IRRIGATION.

THE CONVENTION OF YESTERDAY.

Earnest Resolutions and Good Speeches.

The Convention was called to order by Governor Colcord at half past 11.

The call for the Convention and the Governor's response was read by his Private Secretary.

The Governor then addressed the Convention as follows:

Gentlemen of Nevada:—You are now fully advised as to objects for which you are assembled here today, and it is my very pleasant duty to extend to you a most cordial welcome to the capital of your State.

You are the builders and I sincerely hope, and believe, that this is the time and the opportunity for the laying of the foundation upon which will grow up a numerous, happy and prosperous people in the State of Nevada. The subjects before this meeting for discussion are of vital importance to every citizen of the State, and should attract the attention of the miner, the merchant, the professional man, the mechanic and the farmer alike, that they may each and all be induced to render assistance toward the development of our resources and the general upbuilding of our State. The natural flow of the waters of our rivers, the facilities for its distribution, and the laws on our statute relating to irrigation districts, are the most important matters for your consideration. These and kindred matters will be ably presented by gentlemen who have made them a study, and it is earnestly hoped that any gentleman present who desires to express his views upon the subject matter before this Convention will have an opportunity of so doing, and that the discussions may be absolutely free from anything of a political nature.

Governor Colcord was elected Permanent Chairman.

C. H. Colburn was elected Secretary.

At the suggestion of the Convention the Chairman appointed the following on Order of Business:

R. L. Fulton, Washoe; J. F. Dennis, Lander; Jos. Marzen, Humboldt; J. A. Knapp, Esmeralda; C. C. Hennings, Douglas; E. Strother, Storey; M. Little, Ormsby; Geo. Russell, Elko; J. E. Gignoux, Lyon.

On motion of Mr. Newlands the Convention took a recess of ten minutes to give Committee time to report.

AFTER RECESS.

The Governor introduced Hon. Francis Newlands, who took the platform amid the applause of the Convention. He outlined the object of the Convention and, with the aid of a topographical map, showed the storage and irrigation possibilities of the State. He went along each river and showed the various water sites. On the west side of the Sierra Nevada Mountains, he said, were three rivers irrigating over a million acres of land in California.

On the Nevada side were three similar rivers having their source in the same mountains, and their waters are wasted. The only difference in the rivers is that on the banks of one river are found enterprising, progressive people, and on the other side—the Nevada side—the people sit quietly and refuse to do anything. [Applause.]

He then explained the storage methods and showed how much easier it was to store and distribute water than people generally supposed. He showed how the interests of the miner and farmer were identical and that water storage would materially assist both.

The speaker explained that he had caused the various reservoir sites to be surveyed and had acquired title to the sites. Any irrigation district could acquire those sites of him at actual cost and six per cent per annum interest.

The limit of individual effort had been reached and now there must be a preconcerted effort on the part of everybody in those various irrigation districts. Under the last irrigation law passed by the Legislature citizens could organize and by electing their own Board of Directors, etc., form a water district, and after the Board have formulated a plan the same can be accepted or rejected by a popular vote.

Unfortunately the mining industry was on the wane, and unless it was supplanted by agricultural industry there would be no State. [Applause.]

Gen. Clarke then asked the speaker if he would turn these water sites over to the people of the irrigation districts at first cost with 6 per cent added to be held in trust for the people, and the answer was, "Yes, if taken in any reasonable time," and there was great applause.

COMMITTEE REPORT.

The Committee on Platform and Resolutions made the following report:

Resolved, That the future prosperity will largely depend upon the development of its agricultural interests, and that this development can only be accomplished by united action on the part of the people for the storage and distribution of water and the reclamation of arid lands, and that we hail with satisfaction the evidences now presented that the State is about to enter upon a new era of improvement.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the platform adopted by the Irrigation Congress of seventeen States and Territories recently in session at Salt Lake City, Utah, which requests the Congress of the United States to grant in trust upon such conditions as shall serve the public interest of the States and Territories needful of irrigation, all lands now a part of the public domain within such States and Territories, excepting mineral lands, for the purpose of developing irrigation, to render the lands now arid fertile and capable of supporting population.

Resolved, that Whereas, At the last session of the Legislature an Irrigation Law was passed providing as a first step that a petition be presented to the Board of County Commissioners in the county in which the land, or a greater portion thereof, is situated signed by a majority of the freeholders of the proposed district, owning lands susceptible of irrigation, from a common source, requesting them to fix the boundaries of such district and to call an election, and providing that at such election if two-thirds of the voters are in favor of forming the district it shall be organized as an irrigation district, and also providing that such district shall be divided into five divisions by the County Commissioners, at the time the boundaries are fixed and the election called; and that from each of these divisions one director shall be elected, the five forming a Board of Directors to control all the business of the district, according to the provision of the statute.

And whereas, Such district is, when organized, simply in the position of a public corporation, having a perfect organization, but without power to adopt any plans of storage, irrigation or reclamation, or to incur any expenses or issue any bonds without a vote of the majority of voters of the district.

And whereas, It is essential that such districts shall be organized comprising respectively the lands capable of reclamation within reach of the four great rivers of the State, viz: Humboldt, Truckee, Carson and Walker, in order that plans may be prepared, estimates made and propositions for actual reclamation submitted to a vote of the people interested.

Now, therefore, This Convention without committing itself to any particular plan of reclamation, and without committing itself to the question as to whether any bonds shall be issued in the various districts, or whether the amount shall be greater or less, recommends to the people living within these various districts, the immediate organization of water districts in order that they may secure a position which shall enable them to do effective work.

A Black Eye to Oroville.

An attempt was recently made in Oroville to incorporate the city. It has been growing in importance since the Golden Feather Mining scheme was turned loose there and the leading citizens concluded that if they were to sell land in their citrus belt and be regarded as a live and progressive city they must incorporate.

But the slurrans of the town wouldn't stand it, and incorporation was snowed under by a small majority.

Appropos of this, the APPEAL will tell the Oroville people a little story.

John Walters and Henry Rinbeck, of Illinois, who have been stopping at the Arlington a few days to see friends in this city, were on their way to California to invest $50,000 in citrus land.

They were very much interested in Thermalito, just across from Oroville, and were on their way to invest.

Hearing of the defeat of incorporation they decided that a town nearly 50 years old that wouldn't incorporate was too slow for them and they are going to purchase land near Los Angeles.

There is no need of pointing out the moral of this story; it is too obvious.

The Interviewer.

The Interviewer drew a crowd house last night. It is the best thing in the amateur line ever presented in Carson. It is beautiful and dazzling and the chorus of young ladies trained under Mr. Meder's direction rendered melody good enough for the Grand Opera House in San Francisco. Frank Bryant more than surprised the audience in the leading role. It will be presented again this evening better than ever.

There is no Secret

About your buying shoes to advantage. You may not know any more about the quality of leather than you do about a lost comet but that is no reason why you should get "stuck." Either you get your money's worth or you don't and if you don't it is your own fault. We are in the shoe business because we happen to know something about shoes and leather. It is "bread and butter" to us, therefore we make it a STUDY. Of the knowledge you get as much benefit as though you possessed it yourself for we place it entirely in your disposal and if you think that other houses can quote lower prices than we do, come and look at the goods and and prices. We will put our time against yours and we feel confident that the result will be a mutual benefit.
